

EVIDENCE ROOM SPECIAL FEATURE

Michael Sherlock

Michael "Biker" Sherlock was an American Professional downhill skateboarder and street luger. He was one of the most successful participants in those sports and helped pioneer it to be on a mainstream stage.

"This crime scene was staged"

Scott Roder

The Evidence Lab

Critical Points Found in The Evidence Room.net Report

1. Forensic Inconsistencies: Abrasion on the forehead not consistent with self-inflicted gunshot wound (GSW). Blood on the magazine clip suggests a blunt force impact rather than GSW.

2. Timing of Injuries: Sherlock was actively bleeding before GSW. GSW penetrated through the tongue, suggesting a reflex action inconsistent with self-infliction.

3. Gravity Blood Droplets: Indicate Sherlock was likely "pistol-whipped" before the fatal shot, supporting a non-self-inflicted scenario.

4. Fall Impact: Injuries on right hand and inside thumb consistent with a fall. Sand and debris on clothing suggest a fall occurred during a scuffle.

5. Weapon Positioning: Gun found nearest to the left hand, inconsistent with a right-handed individual, raising doubts about a self-inflicted GSW.

6. Trajectory Inconsistency: GSW severed the spine, not consistent with a self-inflicted shot. Projectile trajectory suggests forced insertion with a slight upward direction.

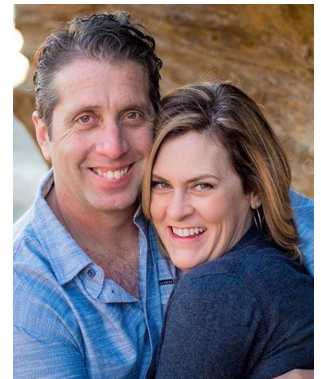

7. Sideways Gun Placement: Evidence suggests the gun was forcibly inserted sideways, confirmed by injuries and blood patterns on the left side of the firearm.

8. Sand Presence: Scrap marks on the firearm and sand on clothing indicate the gun was fired after coming into contact with sand, supporting the idea of staging.

9. Staged Crime Scene Indicators: No ejected shell casing recovered, blunt force trauma, gun position, overall appearance of Sherlock, and body position all suggest a staged crime scene.

10. Police Investigation Critique: Criticism of a cursory investigation, reliance on confirmation bias, and a call for a more thorough analysis of evidence.

Note: The summarized points are based on the provided text and do not reflect independent verification. We reserve the right to modify opinions with additional information.

Biker & Amy Sherlock

Biker was an X-Games champion

Contact Us

Primary Contacts

Cleveland Office:

Direct Line: (216) 502-0400

Email: roderevidence@icloud.com